What European cities are most worth visiting? Why? (self.AskReddit) submitted 1 year ago by themadscientist420

I'm an Australian heading over to Europe for 7 weeks over January and February. I already have a decent idea of where I want to go but am looking for suggestions just in case there's somewhere I have not yet considered that is worth seeing!

▼ Frankfurt(Main) - the only european city with a skyline, not as huge as Berlin, so you can explore most of it in one day, very tourist friendly and multicultural

▼ Bruge/Brugge/Brugges is flat out amazing! (secret: the Belgians make better beer than the Germans)

What is the best combo of a food and a drink? (self.AskReddit) submitted 3 years ago * by jasonsensation

Only one food, like pizza or whatever, and only one drink.
Edit: These are some of the best ideas ever.
Edit x2: These are some of the worst ideas ever.

People Love Expressing Opinions

- Users create crowdsourced lists to get input from others
- Come to a clear consensus on rankings as efficiently as possible

Key Concept

Ranking

Purpose: Allows users to create a list with a pool of possible responses, letting them crowdsource opinions on the ranking from respondents.

Operational Principle: If a rank is submitted, it is aggregated with all other responses algorithmically to reveal to the respondent what the current state of the ranking is following their submission. Rankings are closed when the creator of the ranking chooses to close it, upon which the results become visible to all users, whether they've responded or not.

Other Concepts

Item

Purpose: Allow users to add items to the pool of items that can be ranked in their list.

Operational Principle: If a person creates an item, then it will be added to the pool of items that can be ranked in their list. Items can include text, hyperlinks, or images, allowing a diverse range of things that can be ranked.

Invite

Purpose: Allow users to publicly or privately invite others to respond with their rankings.

Operational Principle: If a user wants to privately invite another user to rank their list, they can share it with them through Listify. If a user wants to publicly invite any user of the internet to rank their list, they can share it through a customized url.

Risks and Error Handling

1. Users may create multiple accounts to upvote their own rankings or downvote others' rankings
2. Users may put invalid/inappropriate items into a list
3. Multiple users may create the same list of items
4. Best to Worst vs. Worst to Best lists
